Checklist of Questions to Answer in Your Estate Plan for Your Children

Good parents care about their children's future-great parents plan for it. No one likes to think of what would happen if his or her children were left without a parent. Sadly, accidents do happen, and no one is guaranteed to watch their children grow into adults.

Crossing your fingers and hoping that your children will never be left without parents is not the best way to protect them. Instead, establishing a sound plan in the event that your kids are left without you is the best way to protect them, yourself, and the rest of your family.

We created a checklist based on the common questions we ask parents who are just starting out their estate planning journey. Every situation is a little different, but these general questions will help you get started:

Caretaking:
Who would you want to care for your children long term if you were gone?
If that person or people live far away, who would you want to care for your children temporarily until they could travel to your children?
Do you have a preference for the parenting style(s) you would like the guardian(s) to follow?
Do you have a preference for where your children go to school?
Do you have a preference for a religion you want your children to follow?
Do you have a place where you have compiled all of their important documents, including birth certificates, social security cards, passports, etc.?
If so, do your choice(s) for guardian(s) know where these documents are kept?
Finances:
Finances: Who would you like to manage the money you leave for them if they are minors?
Who would you like to manage the money you leave for them if they are minors?
Who would you like to manage the money you leave for them if they are minors? Do you want there to be a maximum amount spent on them each year if they are minors?
Who would you like to manage the money you leave for them if they are minors? Do you want there to be a maximum amount spent on them each year if they are minors? Do you want to set aside a specific amount for higher education?
Who would you like to manage the money you leave for them if they are minors? Do you want there to be a maximum amount spent on them each year if they are minors? Do you want to set aside a specific amount for higher education? How would you want them to receive their money as adults?
 Who would you like to manage the money you leave for them if they are minors? Do you want there to be a maximum amount spent on them each year if they are minors? Do you want to set aside a specific amount for higher education? How would you want them to receive their money as adults? Would you like them to receive the funds outright in full?
